

ALZHEIMER'S - IT'S A NEW DAY

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approval of aducanumab (Aduhelm) from Biogen — the first drug to slow the progression of Alzheimer's — is a milestone in the treatment of the disease and a beginning of a completely new future for Alzheimer's treatments. This treatment, while not a cure, is a pivotal step and the first of a number of treatments to come.

“This FDA drug approval ushers in a new era in Alzheimer's treatment and research.”

Maria C. Carrillo, Alzheimer's Association
chief science officer

“On behalf of those impacted by Alzheimer's and all other dementia, we welcome and celebrate this historic FDA approval,” said Harry Johns, president and CEO of the Alzheimer's Association. “We won't stop until a day without Alzheimer's and all other dementia becomes a reality — with effective treatment options for diverse populations living in all stages of Alzheimer's.”

PUTTING EMPHASIS ON EARLY DIAGNOSIS

Early detection of Alzheimer's disease is important — now more than ever with a treatment available. Early diagnosis has long demonstrated better health outcomes for individuals and their caregivers.

If you or a loved one is experiencing memory changes, the Alzheimer's Association strongly encourages speaking with a health care provider for a thorough evaluation, diagnosis and to discuss treatment options.
